Versioncheck

This page is meant for users who have updated their coppermine install. This script goes through the files on your webserver and tries to determine if your local file versions on the webserver are the same as the ones from the repository at <http://coppermine.sourceforge.net>, this way displaying the files you were meant to update as well. It will show everything in red that needs to be fixed. Entries in yellow need looking into. Entries in green (or your default font color) are OK. Click on the help icons to find out more.

Unable to connect to online repository

Coppermine was unable to connect to the online repository. This can have two reasons:

- the coppermine online repository is currently down - check if you can browse this page: <http://coppermine.sourceforge.net/repository.txt> - if you can't access this page, try again later.
- PHP on your webserver is configured with `allow_url_fopen` turned off (by default, it's turned on). If the server is yours to administer, turn this option on in `php.ini` (at least allow it to be overridden with `ini_set`). If you're webhosted, you will probably have to live with the fact that you can't compare your files to the online repository. This page will then only display the file versions that came with your distribution - updates will not be displayed.

The script is defaulting to the local copy of the version-files now. The data may be inaccurate if you have upgraded Coppermine and you haven't uploaded all files. Changes to the files after the release won't be taken into account as well.

Installed Coppermine version

You have currently installed: 1.4.19

If you think this is entirely wrong and you're supposed to be running a higher version of Coppermine, you probably haven't uploaded the most recent version of the file `include/init.inc.php`
